Some doctors claim that it can be possible for humans to live as long as 160 years thanks to gene therapy. The process will involve preparing the gene map of each individual. Then, the genes that are likely to cause diseases will be discovered. The necessary treatment will be initiated before the detected genes cause any disease. All precautions will be taken to prevent any likely disease, which means diseases will disappear completely. However, the majority of geneticists aren’t sure that this will ever be possible. They point out that preparing the gene map of each individual is so difficult and costly. Besides this, a very little percentage of the genes that cause diseases have been identified. For these reasons, lengthening the life span remains as impossible for the time being.

34. According to the passage, gene therapy ______.

| A) will let us know exactly what causes certain diseases |
| B) is an issue on which scientists have been doing research for years |
| C) involves taking precautions for every possible disease with the help of gene findings |
| D) has already saved a lot of lives |
| E) has already provided scientists with satisfactory results |

35. As stated in the passage, geneticists who oppose to gene therapy ______.

| A) base their claim on the difficulty of gene mapping and insufficient information about malignant genes |
| B) are the ones who haven’t been able to identify the genes that cause diseases |
| C) blame the others who support this method for their failure |
| D) point out that the cost of the method is the main problem |
| E) claim that nobody will ever be able to live for 160 years |

36. It is hinted in the passage that in order to prevent a disease ______.

| A) the life span of individual must be increased |
| B) diseases must be treated immediately after they appear |
| C) the genes that cause the disease must be eliminated |
| D) the gene maps of many individuals need to be compared |
| E) geneticists need to know which gene causes it |

Early this morning, a middle aged, thin and short man entered the National Bank. He was carrying a strange white parcel which looked like a birthday present. He waited in the queue for about ten minutes and then approached the counter. He told the clerks that he was in a hurry and he needed to withdraw as much money as possible. The clerks were surprised, they looked at the man’s face. That moment, he took his gun out and told them to give him all the money in the safe. The security guards drew their guns and pointed them at the robber. He boldly shouted that there was a bomb in his white parcel. Everyone was afraid. The customers, clerks and even the security officers ran out. The robber was trapped inside. He couldn’t open the safe, neither could he go out. There were just old newspapers in his box, he had nothing to do. Then, the police arrived and arrested him.
